

Not fully deployment-ready yet, but close.

The bot is doing a good job with basic discovery and rapport-building, but the flow needs improvement before launch because it delays the CTA too much and some transitions feel abrupt.

Overall Score: 7/10

What the bot did well

The bot did well in asking follow-up questions instead of immediately sending the link. It tried to understand the lead's situation, dating struggles, confidence issues, relationship goal, location, age, and current status.

It also avoided being overly pushy, which is good for Jamie's brand because the setter should feel calm, grounded, and conversational.

The bot also started positioning Jamie's coaching properly when it said Jamie's approach is different because it includes real feedback and practice. That part was good.

Main issues I noticed

The biggest issue is that the bot keeps asking too many questions before giving the next step.

The lead already showed strong buying intent several times:

- "I need help figuring out what I'm doing wrong."
- "I feel stuck."
- "I'd be open to coaching."
- "What would be the next step?"

At that point, the bot should have clearly said:

"The next step is a free discovery call with Jamie."

Then it can proceed with the required prequalification questions.

The second issue is the transition into prequalification questions. Since Jamie wants those questions included, the bot can keep them, but it needs to introduce them better.

Right now, it jumps from emotional dating struggles into:

- "Do you live in the US, Canada, or Europe?"
- "How old are you?"
- "Are you currently single?"
- "Would you say you're out of shape, average, or built?"

The questions are not the issue. The transition is.

A better transition would be:

The next step would be a free discovery call with Jamie. Before I send the right link, I just need to ask a few quick fit questions so I can make sure I point you in the right direction. Cool?

Health/fitness question assessment

Since Jamie insisted this should stay in the chatflow, I would not remove it.

But I would revise the wording.

Current version feels a little blunt:

A big factor in dating is health and wealth... would you say you're out of shape, average, or built?

Better version:

Got it. And just to understand where you're at overall, how would you describe your current fitness/lifestyle right now: out of shape, average, or in good shape?

Jamie Date

AI Setter • Reply time: instant

Hey, I saw one of Jamie's videos about why women lose interest, and honestly it hit me. I keep getting ghosted after a few messages on dating apps. I don't know if I'm being too boring, too available, or if my profile just sucks. What do you think I should do?

ugh, getting ghosted after a few messages is so frustrating... especially when you're trying and it keeps happening. Outside of this situation, does this kind of thing happen to you with other women too?

Yeah, getting ghosted after a few messages is frustrating, especially when you feel like you're actually trying. Usually, it comes down to either the conversation feeling too safe, too interview-like, or not creating enough curiosity. When it happens, is it usually after you open the conversation, after a few back-and-forth messages, or when you try to ask her out?

it seems like this is going for a while... how long has this been going on for you... months, years?

It's been happening for around 6 months. I usually start with "hey, how's your day?" then ask what she does for work or what she likes to do. The conversation seems fine at first, but after a few replies, they stop responding.

besides that, are there any other challenges that seem to come up a lot for you?

Yeah, honestly my confidence has taken a hit because it keeps happening. I don't know if I'm just bad at texting or if women are just not interested in me.

sounds like you've put thought into this... what else have you tried to do to resolve this?

I haven't really tried anything different. I usually just keep it polite because I don't want to come off weird or too aggressive. I'm not really sure how to be playful without sounding cheesy.

can I ask you a slightly personal question... deep down, what result are you actually looking for with women right now? you can be totally honest, no judgment.

Honestly, I want a real relationship. I'm tired of getting matches that go nowhere. I want to feel more confident talking to women and actually get dates instead of just being ignored.

so you know what you want and you've been trying for a while... if you had to guess, why do you think it hasn't happened yet... is it just not knowing what to do or something else?

I think it's probably that I don't really know what to say or how to keep the conversation interesting. I know what I want, but I feel stuck and I don't know what to fix first.

in my experience I've found that it's not that men can't do dating, it's just that it's the only area in life where you can't really get direct feedback so you're just stuck guessing... does that make sense?

Yeah, that makes sense. I think I need help figuring out what I'm doing wrong because I've been stuck in the same pattern for months.

have you ever considered working with someone on this or getting coaching before?

I haven't tried coaching before, but I'd be open to it if it can actually help me figure out what I'm doing wrong and how to fix it.

that makes sense. that's exactly why Jamie's approach is different... it's not just advice... it's actual practice with real feedback from Jamie directly, so you stop guessing and start knowing exactly what to do... if you had that kind of clarity, do you think you'd be able to fix this?

Yeah, I think having that clarity would help a lot. I just don't want to keep guessing anymore. What would be the next step?

before we go any further, I just want to make sure this would even be an option... do you live in the US, Canada, or Europe?

US

how old are you, if you don't mind me asking?

36

since you mentioned you're looking for a real relationship... that helps a lot. Are you currently single?

yes

so a big factor in dating is health and wealth... on that line of thinking, when it comes to your health, would you say you're out of shape, average, or built?

What would be the next step?

just checking in on you... Another big factor is stability. Financially, would you say you're living paycheck to paycheck, have a few grand saved, or living comfortably with money in savings?

living comfortably with money in savings

Perfect. Based on what you told me, you're a good fit for private coaching. The easiest next step is a quick 1:1 call so I can map out the fastest plan for you. Here's the link to book a time that works for you:

<https://www.jamiedatecoaching.com/privatecoaching>